City council approves water, sewer rate increase

By Larry Rowell
Editor

Liberty City Council held second reading and adopted an ordinance which will raise water and sewer rates over the next three years.

Councilman Brian Beeler abstained while the rest of the council voted to approve the measure.

Over the three year period, the cost for water will rise from $12.22 for the first 2,000 gallons to $14.66 in fiscal year 2015-16. FY 17-18 will increase to $16.86.

Coupled with the sewer increase with the first 2,000 gallons of waste water currently costing $12.16, by 2017-18, the cost will be $16.78 for the same 2,000 gallons. FY 15-16 shows an increase to $14.59.

Councilwoman Carla Wesley Turner said that she's received no negative feedback from constituents over the last month.

"The people I have talked to have really expressed appreciation of how it's going to be tiered, that it's not going to be all at once because we know there's a lot of people who financially struggle," Turner said.

The rate increase is necessary, Mayor Steven Brown said, to assist in paying for the new waste water treatment plant that must be in place by Jan. 1, 2018.

In last month's meeting, Brown told the council that he hoped the city would receive $1.5 million in grant funding through the state and the Appalachian Regional Commission, reducing the $4.1 million price tag to $2.9 million.

However, Brown said that the $1 million Community Development Block Grant was denied, negating the $500,000 grant which was tied to the CDBG funds.

"I'm working with Jim Brown (Lake Cumberland Area Development District) and Bob Smallwood of GRW (engineering firm overseeing the project) to resubmit this application before August. Hopefully once they see what we've had in the past and the burden it's going to put on our citizens for this repayment that we can convince them this is a worthy project for them to fund," Brown said.

In the May city council meeting, Brown said that to pay for the new waste water treatment plant, the city has arranged a $4.1 million loan with the Kentucky Infrastructure Authority at a .95 percent interest rate for 20 years with an annual payment of $209,228. The loan agreement carries a "forgiveness clause" of 10 percent, which would reduce the loan amount by $410,000.

In other business, the council:

■ Had first reading of the 2015-16 budget. Total estimated revenues are projected to be $4,063,940 while total appropriations are expected to be $3,823,735. Second reading and adoption has been set for Thursday, June 18, at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

■ Held first reading of an ordinance amending the 2014-15 budget. Councilmen Jim Worley said he wants the city to have a balanced budget next year.

"I would like to go on the record that we have overspent the budget by $94,025. And the reason I'm putting that in there, I would like to see if we can do better next year because this is the people's money," Worley said.

Brown said that unexpected expenses such as a new engine for the fire truck and new motors at the sewer plant accounted for the lion's share of the expenditures.

■ Approved a bond agreement through Ross, Sinclair and Associates of Lexington for $850,000 in financing for the city's portion of the Casey County Community and Education Center. The amount is for 10 years, amortized to 15 years, at 2.5 percent interest through Casey County Bank with an annual payment of just over $69,000.

During Saturday's commencement exercises at Casey County High School, Clayton Carroll sang the Star Spangled Banner as members of the Casey County Board of Education looked on. Carroll's grandfather, former Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll, was the featured speaker for the event and is fifth from the left in the background.

Commencement exercises are a rite of passage in many communities, and this community is no exception. With each of the graduates inviting parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles, and other relatives and friends, Casey County High School's annual graduation ceremonies are always high in attendance, often with standing room only for guests.

Superintendent Marion Sowders welcomed the graduates and their families at the beginning of the ceremony on Saturday. He congratulated the seniors on the hard work they had put into their 12-plus years of school, and concluded his remarks with the words of a popular Rascal Flatts song, "My Wish."

"My wish, for you," Sowders said, "is that this life becomes all that you want it to. Your dreams stay big, your worries stay small, and you never need to carry more than you can hold. And while you're out there getting where you're getting to, I hope you know somebody loves you, and wants the same things too. Yeah, this, is my wish."

Following the superintendent's address, keynote speaker former Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll took the podium.

"First of all," Carroll said, "why am I here? Why did I, former governor of Kentucky, come to Liberty to speak at a graduation? Well, I'll tell you. One of you called me. Can you guess who it was?"

He then pointed a finger across the podium to the crowd and named the culprit.

"Clay Carroll," he said, as everyone laughed. "My grandson."

Carroll proceeded to offer words of encouragement to the seniors, mixing humor with sound advice in an effort to motivate the class to surpass their potential.

Natasha Coffey honors the tradition of decorating mortar boards with her clever design and message.

"You may tell me that I just don't realize your circumstance, and that I don't know what you've been through or what you came from. Well, let me tell you something," Carroll said. "I could care less about your 'circumstance.' Your circumstance has nothing to do with what you can achieve."

Carroll, who came from a farming family of 11 children, said that he never let anything hold him back from doing what he set his mind to.

"The basic fact of the matter is, there are no limitations," Carroll said. "I even have a secret to success that I am going to share with you. To all of you who want to make something of yourselves, to all of you who want to change the world, here's how you do it— get up, and get out of bed, and get to work."

Chelsey Lynn, class treasurer, also offered words of encouragement to her fellow seniors, urging them to never forget what makes them who they are.

"As we face new beginnings and new challenges, hold on to your values, work ethic, and especially your humanity," Lynn said.

Though this was an afternoon of celebration, there was an element of sadness laced throughout. With two seniors absent from the festivities, the speeches given by class officers acknowledged the pain the senior class had felt upon the passing of their friends.

Patrick Bowlin, a friend of the late Taylor Allen, wrote a song entitled "Friends Like Me," which seniors

Demrow and staff ready to serve

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of stories highlighting the duties of county government agencies. This week: Casey County Coroner.

Alexia Walters
KPA Intern

Curt Demrow grew up in a coroner's office, watching his father, Bill Demrow, who worked in the Lincoln County coroner's office for 35 years. Demrow said Curt came to work with him all the time and he remembers him sitting in the examination room watching him work.

Following in his father's footsteps Curt Demrow, 39, from Waynesburg, became a deputy coroner in Lincoln County and remained in that position for 10 years. He was elected Casey County coroner on Jan. 5, 2015 and will serve a four year term.

Demrow said a typical day for him is spent waiting on a phone call from 911 dispatch or the emergency room, so he can go out to a crime scene. He said he is on call 24/7.

"I have to be ready to serve at any moment," Demrow said.

Demrow said he is responsible for investigating all deaths in the county and determining the cause and manner of those deaths that do not occur under the care of a physician.

Since taking office, Demrow has certified 35 deaths as of May 29. He has not responded to any homicides thus far.

"I take great pride to thoroughly investigate deaths and be a voice for the dead," Demrow said.

Demrow has three deputy coroners, one who is paid (Michael Brown) and two special deputies (Jason Tackett and Bill Demrow). The deputies can perform the same tasks as the coroner. For example if Demrow were

Local man arrested on child pornography charges

By Larry Rowell

A Liberty man arrested on June 3 faces 20 charges of being in possession of child pornography.

Brian Keith Evans, 43, of 569 Ky. 49, was arrested at his home by Kentucky State Police, who executed a search warrant to gain access to Evans' home.

Court records state that Evans had 20 videos on a laptop and external hard drive officers seized. Further, Evans told officers that he had downloaded pornography for years, searching the Internet for "preteen" and "age 13" material.

Evans, who was arraigned and pleaded not guilty in Casey County District Court on Thursday before Judge Michael Loy, is being held in the Casey County Detention Center on a $10,000 cash bond.

Casey alumni football game great idea, huge success

This past Friday, the much anticipated inaugural Casey County High School alumni football game kicked off in Rebel Stadium.

The players ranged in age from the early 20s all the way to the late 50s. Some players looked in shape and ready to play while others filled out their uniforms with much more than muscle.

One player who suited up was Todd Hoskins, who didn't play the game while at CCHS. He got to play and told me he always wanted to play and now, he had his night under the lights.

The Rebels current coach, Sam Marple, also

Larry ROWELL
Editor

played and faced a formidable task — blocking current college player Tyler Padgett, who is a big boy and plays at the University of the Cumberland.

What I can tell you is this. Sam Marple can still run with the big dogs. I witnessed play after play where, playing center, he stood Padgett up and kept him from penetrating the offensive line.

On the sidelines, Padgett told me, "Yeah, he can play," referring to his former coach. Marple is more than a beast. The mild mannered Marple was a monster out there.

What I hope his current players witnessed and understood was their coach not only knows how to coach and lead a team, he can play the game as well.

Further, Marple should be applauded for finding ways to engage the alumni and get them involved where they will support this year's team in the fall.

Nothing creates excitement in a small town football stadium like a large cheering crowd of local supporters.

As a photographer, my skills are somewhat dubious at best, but there are times when I happen to be in the right place at the right time, what we called a "Kodak Moment" back in the day.

Zach Summers, 21, who graduated in 2012, and is battling brain cancer, received permission from his doctor to play in the game.

On one play, the lean and lanky Summers, a tight end, went out for a pass, angling toward the sideline.

The quarterback threw the pass and Summers went up for it with Brandon Luna all over his back.

Not only did Summers make a spectacular catch, he hung on to the ball as he was being tackled as witnessed in the accompanying photo.

Doug Eads, 50, a longtime sports writer for the Somerset newspaper, told me that after watching Summers play, he had no problems whatsoever, when he compared his story to Summers' fight with cancer.

Zach, you're an inspiration to us all. Carry on, and may God grant you a long and happy life.

Graduates: Don't fear the dreamer

So, you've graduated. What now? Are you going to college? Technical school? Are you entering the work force? Do you have plans of lounging in pjs and dedicating yourself to the art of Netflix binging for the next couple of years?

Regardless of what society tries to force feed you, your plans after high school are just that: your plans. They are not the plans of parents, friends, aunts and uncles. Why do I say this?

Because the decisions you make right now about your future will not affect the future of your parents, friends, aunts or uncles — at least, not directly. The decisions you make right now will determine how the rest of your own life plays out.

If you could care less about Normandy Beach or quadratic equations, and would rather spend your days carving out wardrobes, don't waste your time and money on university classes. Likewise, if you do not like manual tasks and technical work — you should probably invest your time in academics.

A skilled laborer offers as much to society as a criminal lawyer. One is not better than the other; everyone has been given their own unique set of gifts to make the world a better place.

There's a machine in the world today that pumps out what's expected of you on the daily. In order to live a life that's accepted by our society, you have to measure yourself up to its standards. And oftentimes, those standards do not align with what we really want to do with our life. That's not to say you won't make a mistake — you may think you want one thing and find you want another. But that's okay, don't be afraid to dream. Just because one thing fails, doesn't mean it will all fail. Failure is a good thing — it means you are reaching toward achieving something that is out of your control.

A song the majority of you may not know says this, "Find your passion, and make it happen." That's what you have to do. Forget society norms — take the right steps to make your own dreams a reality.

If you don't want to go to college, fine; but if that's not the right step for you, push yourself in another area. Don't let that be an excuse as to why you never do anything. Dream-fulfillment is not the same as wish-fulfillment. To fulfill a dream, you will have to work hard — more often than not, you will have to work harder than someone who is just doing what's expected of them. You might have to work two or three jobs to support yourself. But don't give up. Figure out what makes you who you are, and find the spark inside of you that is going to make the world a better place for someone else. Always, always, always push yourself further than you think you are able.

Nicole BURTON
Staff Writer

When I was about to graduate high school, a mentor sent me a speech that really inspired me. Here is an excerpt of that speech, by Jeff Bezo, which was given to the graduating class of Princeton in 2010.

"Tomorrow, in a very real sense, your life — the life you author from scratch on your own — begins.

How will you use your gifts? What choices will you make?

Will inertia be your guide, or will you follow your passions?

Will you follow dogma, or will you be original?

Will you choose a life of ease, or a life of service and adventure?

Will you wilt under criticism, or will you follow your convictions?

Will you bluff it out when you're wrong, or will you apologize?

Will you guard your heart against rejection, or will you act when you fall in love?

Will you play it safe, or will you be a little bit swash-buckling?

When it's tough, will you give up, or will you be relentless?

Will you be a cynic, or will you be a builder?

Will you be clever at the expense of others, or will you be kind?"

My hope for you, graduates, is that you never play it safe. Countries were not built by men and women who did what they were 'supposed' to do with their life. Inventions, discoveries, masterpieces — humanity would have none of these things if people like you stuck to the status quo.

There are so many bright minds in this county. There are thinkers, and builders; there are artists and athletes. Don't deprive the world of the gift you can bring to it just because someone says the right path for you is something else. This world needs the best of everybody in order to become a better place.

Graduating class of 2015, I truly feel like you can help make this world a better place. Be diligent, be persistent, and work hard at whatever you set your mind to do. The sky is not the limit; the only limit to your potential is you.

'The Necessary' was necessary

WARNING: If you are under 50, don't bother reading this because you won't have any idea what I'm talking about.

I am probably going to bore you to death with something that is near and dear to my heart and used to be near and dear to my elimination system. I'm talking about that fine little structure that used to be built way out behind everyone's house — the privy. It has had many names, some of which are outhouse, outdoor toilet, latrine, john, backhouse, little house out back, necessary, earth closet, and in Australia they were called long-drops. There are many more familiar names but I cannot repeat them in a family newspaper.

I still have my grandparents' privy out behind my house I believe it to be a WPA (Works Progress Administration) privy from the 1930s. The WPA privies had a one-piece cast concrete floor and column for one seat. A hole was dug in an appropriate place not close to the house then the concrete floor was placed over the hole. The sides and roof were added afterward.

Gary Murphy has in his possession a set of plans for a WPA two-holer. He keeps telling me he will share them with me — IF he can find them. I'm still waiting. If you are reading this, Gary, start looking.

When I was in elementary and high school at Middleburg we had outdoor toilets. There was one for the little girls (elementary grades), one for the big girls (high school), and one for the boys. Due to nasty circumstances I don't wish to describe, my dear mother made a trip to at least one school board member and demanded that the toilet for the little girls be replaced forthwith. My mother was a force of nature when she got her dander up and the little girls had a new toilet in short order.

My family did live in a couple of towns with indoor plumbing in the 1950s but we didn't have those amenities until 1975 when we lived in Middleburg. My father was slow to adapt to progress, even to things that had been around for a century or more, and we probably wouldn't have had an indoor toilet if the kitchen hadn't literally fallen off the back of the house. My mother put her foot down then, too, and said we were putting in a bathroom in addition to a new kitchen. As I said before, Mother was a force of nature.

Going to use the privy was an experience. There were rules: check the seat and under it for spiders, watch out for wasps, and don't use the last of the toilet paper without replacing it. In the summer you could suffocate with the heat and the smell unless you dared to leave the door open. In the winter you chanced frostbite of the derriere. In any season, you didn't dawdle out there.

Speaking of toilet paper, many people didn't use it. There were old Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward catalogues substituted for it. I have been told that people using them steered clear of the slick color pages. Then there are people who swore they used corncobs. That would not be a hoot!

I have a copy of a poem my cousin Ruby sent me about 20 years ago. The title is "Passing of the Backhouse" and it was written by James Whitcomb Riley. If you'd be interested in a copy, send me a self-addressed stamped envelope or send me your e-mail address. Now, that is a hoot.

Fiscal court inks new college financing

By Larry Rowell
Editor

With the Casey County Community and Education Center set to open this fall, financing is now in place to pay for it.

Casey County Judge-Executive Randy Dial told magistrates in the June 1 meeting that financing has been set up through Casey County Bank with Ross Sinclair and Associates of Lexington handling the transaction.

Magistrates approved the terms of the financing, which call for annual fixed payments of $56,000 for 10 years at 2.5 percent interest on a $480,000 note. Dial said that the annual payment will come from the county's General Fund.

The $3.6 million dollar building is being paid for through grants and donations.

In other business, magistrates:

■ Re-appointed Dave Smith to the Casey County Public Library Board of trustees for a four-year term which will expire in August 2019.

■ Executed a lease purchase agreement for a 2015 Chevrolet ambulance for Casey EMS at $20,000 down for five years at a cost of $103,990.

■ Held second reading and adoption on the 2015-2016 annual budget ordinance. The General Fund will have $2.198 million while the Road Fund is projected to budget $2.297 million, with $1.64 million allocated to roads. The jail budget is set at $3.55 million, with $1.98 million for protection to persons and property. The total budget is projected to be $8.5 million.

A common misconception citizens have about Demrow's job is in thinking he performs autopsies, but he does order them. After he has done the initial examination, bodies are sent to Frankfort to be autopsied by a medical examiner.

Casey County Fiscal Court sets the budget for the coroner's office. Currently the expense budget for the year is $4,600 with the county providing body

Aside from being the coroner, Demrow has been the owner and funeral director of McKinney-Brown Funeral Home since 2011. He said his profession makes it easier to be coroner because he has most of the supplies he needs.

Demrow said he has big plans for the future. "I hope to establish the coroner's office and bring it up to where other counties are with a vehicle, office and one more paid deputy," Demrow said.

KSP says Stanford officer speeding in pedestrian fatality

The Advocate Messenger

A Stanford police officer was speeding Jan. 15 when his cruiser struck and killed a Crab Orchard pedestrian, according to a Kentucky State Police investigation report.

Four months after the fatal pedestrian wreck, a KSP collision analysis acquired by the Interior Journal through an open records request reveals Stanford officer Travis Richardson, 33, of Crab Orchard, was traveling 90 mph in a 55 mph zone when his issued 2008 Ford Crown Victoria struck and killed Howard Robbins, 69, of Crab Orchard.

Robbins, who was pronounced dead at Fort Logan Hospital in Stanford at 10:45 p.m., was walking across U.S. 150, just before Duvall Lane, when he was hit and thrown to the south shoulder of the road, according to the reconstruction report.

Richardson was on his way to work in Stanford, and a camera inside his cruiser captured the collision, which investigators used to reconstruct the scene and determine the high rate of speed at which he was traveling.

The camera, which Richardson “removed from the vehicle shortly after the collision,” also shows Robbins was “clearly in the eastbound lane of traffic,” the report states.

Investigators said Richardson did not slam on the brakes immediately, and although he did engage them, no marks were left on the roadway. A blood stain from Robbins’ body was found on the south shoulder about six feet from the road.

Distraction was ruled a non-issue by investigators after Richardson’s phone records were subpoenaed and gave no indication that he was texting or talking on the phone at the time of the collision. Audio from the video camera also confirmed no phone conversations took place before or during the wreck.

The investigation was conducted by KSP Trooper Jeff Stith with assistance from Danville Police Department Detective Robert Ladd, who has been an accident reconstructionist for 12 years and helped determine the speed at which Richardson was traveling.

“Using reference points on the roadway and the point of impact, we were able to determine a speed for the vehicle,” the report states.

Although Richardson was placed on administrative leave following the incident, he returned to work on Feb. 2.

Commonwealth’s Attorney Eddie Montgomery has declined prosecution due to lack of criminal activity involved in the case, aside from speeding, he said.

“I just don’t think there’s enough there to charge him as a criminal. There was speed, but there was no alcohol or drugs. I don’t think there’s enough there to convict him beyond a reasonable doubt of a criminal offense. Now, there might be a civil offense,” Montgomery said.

Richardson’s toxicology report was not included with the collision analysis but it does state that he voluntarily traveled to Fort Logan Hospital for a chemical blood test.

Questions still remain as to why Richardson was traveling 35 miles over the speed limit when his shift had not yet started and he was off duty at the time.

Montgomery said the reason he looked at the case was because of the high rate of speed, but he still decided there wasn’t enough reason to charge Richardson with a criminal offense.

Stanford Mayor Eddie Carter said the incident is a “touchy situation” that he can’t comment on at this time.

Carter said a hearing for Richardson will be held June 30 and it will be left up to Richardson whether it is public or private.

Stanford Police Chief Zach Middleton declined to comment while the process is still ongoing but expressed his disappointment in the situation.

Family files lawsuit over fatal Garrard crash

The Advocate Messenger

A Garrard County family that suffered injuries in a March crash that killed a Nicholasville police officer has filed a lawsuit against the officer’s estate, the police department and another woman involved in the collision.

Sean and Nisreen Abraham, along with daughter Zainna, filed the complaint recently in Garrard Circuit Court naming Melissa Suzanne Rhoads, administratrix of the estate of Burke Rhoads, the Nicholasville Police Department and Chasity Gordon of Garrard County as defendants.

The lawsuit seeks an unspecified amount of damages and was filed by Lexington attorney Thomas K. Herron.

None of the defendants has yet filed a response to allegations made in the lawsuit.

According to the complaint, Rhoads operated his cruiser “in a careless and reckless manner at a high rate of speed for the conditions and losing control thereof and causing a collision with both defendant Gordon and plaintiff’s vehicle.”

“Defendant Gordon operated her vehicle negligently in failing to yield the right of way,” the lawsuit continues.

The crash occurred in a heavy fog the morning of March 11 near the Rocky Top convenience store on U.S. 27 in northern Garrard County.

Police at the scene said Rhoads was on his way to a training class in Richmond and was traveling south when his cruiser was clipped by Gordon’s vehicle as it attempted to turn north on to U.S. 27 from Rogers Road.

That collision sent Rhoads’ cruiser into the northbound lanes, where it smashed into the front end of a black Cadillac SUV carrying the Abraham family, police said. All three Abrahams were transported from the scene to the University of Kentucky Chandler Medical Center in Lexington for treatment of injuries, with Sean Abraham being the most seriously injured, police said.

A Kentucky State Police investigation into the crash has not yet been completed.

According to the lawsuit, Sean and Nisreen Abraham suffered severe and permanent injuries, physical pain, mental suffering, medical expenses and lost of wage and future earning capacity. Zainna Abraham suffered physical pain, mental anguish and medical expenses, the lawsuit claims.

City police investigated in bourbon and steroids ring

The State Journal

Given the evidence uncovered in the bourbon and steroid ring, Frankfort Mayor William May will make a request for an investigation of the Frankfort Police Department, told The State Journal on Friday that he would request the Frankfort City Commission to authorize funding if needed for an independent investigation into the city’s police department in light of a former officer’s alleged involvement in a steroid purchasing scheme.

“First of all, I immediately was shocked and disappointed that allegations were made against a Frankfort City Police Officer involved in the sale of illegal steroids,” May said. Learning the officer did admit he was involved in it, I was further disappointed and immediately thought we needed to do some type of investigation to make sure that we clear the department and move forward so that we can restore public confidence and faith in the FPD and the administration.”

May said he contacted Frankfort City Attorney Rob Moore to look at options and had also spoken with Frankfort Police Chief Jeff Abrams saying that it was beneficial to conduct an outside investigation. According to May, Abrams agreed.

I want to reiterate my deep support for the brave men and women of the Frankfort Police Department that go to work everyday and protect our community,” May said. “I have confidence that we can sort through the facts and restore a level of professionalism and integrity that the Frankfort Police Department is known for.”

May said he contacted the FBI but they suggested he contact the Attorney General of Kentucky’s office or Kentucky State Police.

Franklin County Sheriff Pat Melton said Friday that it is still very much an active investigation and that he expects another barrel of stolen bourbon to arrive next week. to the investigation documents, The State Journal found two text messages between alleged ringleader Gilbert “Tony” Curtsinger and Frankfort Police Chief Jeff Abrams in 2013.

The State Journal asked Abrams to explain why he and Curtsinger exchanged text messages Abrams said he knows Curtsinger as an acquaintance through his wife and children.

“I had sent out a mass text for people to contact their representatives about some legislation and he texted me back to say he had,” Abrams said. “Basically we are acquaintances through family members.”

50 Years Ago Week of June 17, 1965

Raymond Elmore, 23, and Robert Wilcher, 18, both formerly of Casey County, were killed in a four-vehicle pile up on Ky. 35 north of Liberty. A Danville man also died in the accident.

Lt. John E. Tarter of Liberty was awarded the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal for service on the Navy Commander Destroyer Division 213 in the combat areas of Vietnam.

Hog prices excelled to the highest in 11 years. Boars were bringing in more than $25, and sows around $21.

Arthur Garrett sold his business, Garrett's Store in Argyle, to Cortez Wesley of Louisville.

A 13-foot hickory tree fell across Ky. 70 west of Liberty, causing Garland Davis to run in a ditch. It did about $200 in damages to his car, along with holding up traffic in both directions for an hour.

Somerset Community College began accepting applications for enrollment for the first-ever classes offered at the new school.

A 20-year-old Liberty man was arrested on charges of stealing a vehicle from the Liberty Motors car lot. His parents went to the authorities after becoming suspicious that their son had stolen the car.

Obituaries: Peggy Jean Porter, 11; and Garnett F. Ellingsworth.

First ‘Casey Music Awards’ celebrates a year of success

By: Nicole Burton
Staff Writer

Although starting the year with a mere 27 band students, by the end of the year Casey County Band has acquired almost 100 members.

Ramona Luttrell, mother of middle school band member J’ace Luttrell, attributes a lot of the success of the past year to first-year band director Jordan Williams.

“Mr. Williams has done an amazing job with these kids, especially to keep my son interested. He is J’ace’s best teacher. I never thought I would be a band mom, but I can honestly say, I enjoy it. J’ace loves it, and that means a lot to me,” said Luttrell.

Williams came into the school year with a focus already in mind. According to Williams, he began this year saying, “My job is to create great musicians, but to create even better people.”

And, according to Williams, he has been able to see some of that happen.

“When I first started here, there was a lot of negativity from the kids, especially on social media. But now, I can go on Instagram, or Facebook, or whatever — and I’m seeing these kids lifting each other up and being positive. And that is no small thing,” said Williams.

Band banquet

At the CMA’s (Casey Music Awards), band members came out in floor-length ballgowns, top hats, and suspenders, dressed up in honor of all they have accomplished in the past year.

Many awards were given throughout the evening, including the National School Choral Award to Clayton Carroll, and the John Phillip Sousa Award to Blake Durham. Both awards are nationally recognized artistic achievements.

Among the awards given out to the students, two groups surprised Williams with words of praise and thanks.

Representing the band, senior member Patrick Bowlin presented Mr. Williams with a gift of appreciation.

“We owe everything we have been able to do this year to you, Mr. Williams,” said Bowlin. “Thank you so much for everything you have done for us, and for really believing in us.”

Also presented to Williams was a gift from the choir, a framed portrait of a silly picture that has become a long-running joke with the CCHS music family.

Williams said he is con-

Graduating senior band members were, from left, Clayton Carroll, Maverick Gadberry, Patrick Bowlin, Conner McGill, Kayla Bell, and Blake Durham. Both Carroll and Durham were recipients of nationally recognized musician awards upon completion of their senior year, with Carroll receiving the National School Choral Award and Durham receiving the John Phillip Sousa Award.

fident that things can only go up from this point. With the Marching Rebels taking the field for the first time in nearly a decade this fall, and several members qualifying for All-State and All-Region Band this past spring, it appears his predictions will prove correct.

“We have accomplished a lot this year. I am so proud of the kids, and all they have done. We have a lot of work to do, but the future looks good,” said Williams.

A tradition of quality in Casey FFA

Hand-built mineral feeders provide learning experience for students

By Nicole Burton
Staff Writer

Casey County FFA is a program with deep roots in the community. Generations of Casey County men and women in FFA have called the basement of the Casey County High School home.

David Carmicle, Class of 1990, was a member of the FFA throughout his high school years.

“Being a part of the FFA was such a big part of my time in high school. We conducted ourselves like professionals, because that was what was expected of us. The FFA was about pride, and tradition,” Carmicle said.

One of the many traditions the Casey County FFA chapter participates in every year is the building of mineral feeders.

Mineral feeders are used to feed livestock, and they sit out on their own in a field. They are vulnerable to the elements, as well as to the animals that feed from them. Big, plastic mineral feeders can be bought at a farm supply store for about $200, but, according to Alan Godbey, CCHS FFA advisor, cattle are really rough on them.

“They flip them over, rub against them, scratch their backs on them—things like that. So, people go and spend a couple hundred dollars on plastic that’ll be tore up pretty soon,” Godbey said.

Godbey believes this is why the chapter’s hand-built mineral feeders, which sell for $150, are so popular.

“They’re big, they’re sturdy, they’re pretty stable. They’re all made out of oak — it’s sturdy, heavy. And unless you have a bull that just wants to go on a rampage, it’s going to last,” he said.

Enjoyable task

The chapter builds the cattle mineral feeders in batches of 12. Most of the time, they do the work in assembly line formation, with the students working together in order to get the majority of the batch finished at the same time.

According to Godbey, the students love working on the feeders.

“The kids love doing it,” he said. “They really enjoy it; like I said, it’s a tradition. A lot of their parents built these mineral feeders, and even some of the kids’ grandparents.”

Carmicle helped build mineral feeders when he was a student in FFA, and won several shop awards during his time with the chapter.

“We worked really hard on those things. But Mr. Murphy insisted we use hand tools — and that was hard. But, there was an art to it. It took some time to handsaw a big piece of oak, but there was a lot of pride in that work. I was proud of my work,” said Carmicle.

Although the students are no longer required to get by with just the use of hand tools, they are still learning how to persevere through difficulty.

“Whenever the students complain about how hard something is to do, I just laugh and remind them that when I was building these things, my advisor was dead against power tools,” said Godbey, laughing. “But these kids have their own struggles and things they got to work through. One thing that is really difficult for students is setting the posts on these feeders. They hate it. They hate doing it. Because to set the posts, you have to toe nail them in. And they get frustrated, because they’re bending their nails, or splintering the wood. But when they finally get it, they can feel good about it,” Godbey said.

While the building of mineral feeders in FFA is a tradition that goes back many years, they are not opposed to modifying their work.

“At one time, we actually built the mineral feeders with a wooden trough. But the problem with wooden troughs is that the mineral is very hard on the wood, and corrodes it pretty quickly. A trough is usually the first thing to go on a feeder. But we actually insert a barrel into the feeder now, and that becomes the trough,” said Godbey.

Best seller

The FFA chapter has no problem selling the mineral feeders, with customers coming from the area as well as nearby counties. The chapter has built and sold 42 feeders this year.

“They call us. We don’t have to put ‘for sale’ signs on them. A couple years ago, a guy called and wanted a feeder. I saw his name on our list, and thought ‘I know that name’. I got to thinking, and realized that was the husband of a woman that I used to teach with in Mercer County. They came all the way here from Harrodsburg to get a feeder — and they build mineral feeders in the Mercer County School. But they came here to buy them. Because we have the best quality,” said Godbey.

Because they sell the mineral feeders at a bargain price, the chapter does not make very much profit on them. But, they will continue to make them as long as there is a demand.

Godbey said one of the biggest reasons for this is to teach the teens important life skills.

“You know, they get to learn how to do things correctly. Mr. Ware and I will walk around the shop, and if we see something that’s off, we’re going to tell them so. We’re going to tell them they have to redo it, because quality is what’s important, which is a life lesson in itself — worry about the quality of a product. Measure twice, cut once. Slow down to go faster. We have a reputation for quality products, and that’s the only thing we will let out.”

Students have worked all year to keep tradition alive in building cattle mineral feeders. Pictured next to the fruits of their labor are, from left, Nelson Smith, Jacob Tarter, and Nick Goode.

CCMS students selected as 2015 Rogers Explorers

Three Casey County Middle School students have been selected to attend The Center for Rural Development’s 2015 Rogers Explorers youth leadership program.

Brenna Hayes, Jenna Vaughn, and Zachary Todd will join middle school students from across Southern and Eastern Kentucky to build their math, science, and technology skills.

One hundred and eighty students — the largest class ever — will converge on the campuses of six Kentucky colleges and universities this summer for the Rogers Explorers program.

“Rogers Explorers gives students a one-of-a-kind learning experience to explore different career opportunities and possible career paths in the fields of math, science, and technology,” said Delaney Stephens, community liaison and youth programs coordinator for The Center. “The program also encourages creative thinking and teamwork and builds leadership skills as the region’s next generation of leaders and entrepreneurs.”

Rogers Explorers is presented by The Center for Rural Development in partnership with Lindsey Wilson College, University of the Cumberlands, Eastern Kentucky University, Morehead State University, Asbury University, and the University of Pikeville.

The program is open to eighth-grade middle school students within The Center’s 45-country primary service area who have a strong interest in developing their skills in leadership, technology, math, science, and community service.

New graduate

Joshua Reed Dyer is a 2015 Summa Cum Laude graduate of Boyle County High School. He is the 18-year-old son of David and Pam Dyer of Danville and the grandson of Hershel and Joberta Reed of Lincoln County, formerly of Casey County. Joshua will be attending the University of Kentucky to pursue a degree in chemical engineering.

‘Manimal’ visits Casey County youth basketball camp

By Quincy Burt
Sports Correspondent

It is the second year of CCHS Coach Maze Stallworth running the off-season youth basketball camp, and he is pulling out all the stops. Well, one stop in particular.

Stallworth’s former teammate from his days at Morehead State University, Kenneth Faried, stopped in to help out with the camp at Casey County High School.

“I’m just excited to be back in Kentucky,” Faried said. “It’s great to be in Casey County to help out my teammate. Anything I can teach (the kids) to help better them so they go home with a better mindset and a better overall understanding of basketball, that’s what I’m trying to do.”

Faried, nicknamed “Manimal” for his fierce athleticism as being half man and half animal, currently plays for the NBA’s Denver Nuggets and is one of the best rebounders in the league. A first-round pick in the 2011 NBA draft following a storied career in Morehead. Faried, originally from New Jersey, will never forget his time on the eastern side of Kentucky.

“It means a lot,” he said. “Being able to come to Morehead and have such an impact on the kids, the people, the community of Morehead. It’s great to bring attention being from that small school, basically making my legacy there and continuing to grow and build and become the NBA player that I am and hope for the future to even be a better player than I am now.”

Faried and Stallworth are remembered for their magical second round performance in the 2011 NCAA tournament when, as the OVC champions and seeded 14th, they knocked off number-four seed Louisville.

Of course, Faried is known for more than just that run to the Big Dance as he is the modern era (post-1973) career rebound leader for the NCAA as he overcame Tim Duncan (1,570) for that honor in the 2011 season, finishing with 1,673 boards in his time at Morehead State.

Now that the Manimal has been unleashed on the NBA, he is known for much more. He is a consistent threat to tally a double double, he has averaged double-digit scoring in each of his four NBA seasons and, he is often the best athlete on the floor.

When he signed a big contract extension last year, it was a short time later that he poured in 26 points and grabbed 25 rebounds in a win over the Timberwolves.

In 2014 Faried was a major part of bringing home a gold medal from the FIBA Basketball World Cup.

So far, he has been a great example that young players can aspire to become. Which is why Stallworth thought it was a good idea to have Faried’s influence in the gym during the three-day camp for kindergarten through eighth grade kids this week.

“As a coach, you like to have someone like that who can help you,” Stallworth said. “It’s always good to have someone who has played at that level the kids can learn from.”

Most of the guys from that Morehead State team keep in contact, and Stallworth and Faried are still extremely close.

Current NBA player Kenneth Faried made an appearance at the Casey County youth basketball camp on Monday. Faried, who plays for the Denver Nuggets, is a former teammate of CCHS basketball coach Maze Stallworth. Faried and Stallworth played together at Morehead State University.

“We are a close-knit group,” Stallworth said. “If we don’t talk every day, it’s every other day. It means a lot for him to take time and come here. He’s a busy guy. It is humbling for him to come and help out here with the kids.”

Between 60-65 kids came out to participate in the camp and along with Faried being around, the current squad of Rebels are also helping impact the younger generation.

“It’s fun,” said Stallworth. “They were once in this position, so they know how fun it is and the kind of experience it is. With Kenneth being here, it brings a little more excitement to it.”

Faried wasn’t heavily recruited, and many said he didn’t have enough offensive talent outside of his athletic ability to make it, but the Manimal has proven time and again hard work pays off – that is his message to the younger generations.

“I want to be guidance for these kids,” Faried said. “More than anything, I want to show them that you can make it out of anywhere, it doesn’t matter where you are from and to enjoy the moment.”

CCHS alumni football game on Friday a hit with players, fans

Zach Summers, 88, hauls in a long pass while Brandon Luna tries to break up the play. Summers, who graduated in 2012, and is battling glioma brain cancer, had a treatment earlier in the week and was cleared by his doctor to play.

Darren Summers, left, stands next to his uncle, David Goode, 59, who played on the first CCHS team in 1974. Summers said as coach, it was his goal “to try and get out of here without any major injuries and no more than 10 fumbles — in the first quarter.”

Current Rebel players showed their support of alumni who helped to build the football program. Coach Sam Marple said he hoped the alumni game will build bonds between former and current players.

The inaugural Casey County High School alumni game kicked off Friday at Rebel field with 60 players of varying ages suiting up for a night of football under the lights. More than $2,000 was raised for the current football program. The blue squad, coached by Steven Brown, defeated the black squad, coached by Darren Summers, 12-0.

photos and commentary /LARRY ROWELL

Current CCHS football coach Sam Marple, 77, had his hands full most of the night blocking Tyler Padgett, who plays for University of the Cumberland.

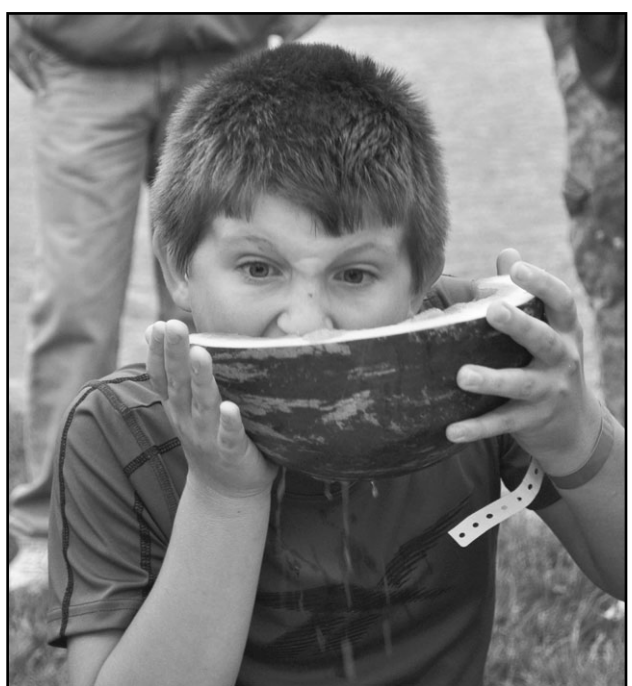

It was full contact and old school, smash mouth football at Rebel field Friday night. Although vicious hits were the norm on the field, both coaches said after the game there were no injuries that linament couldn’t take care of.

Liberty Care Center undergoes renovations

Evaluation helped target areas for improvement

By Nicole Burton
Staff Writer

The thought of nursing homes and around-the-clock care centers could bring to mind bland walls, drab décor and unhappy, unfulfilled residents. Todd Bryant, administrator of Liberty Care and Rehabilitation Center wants to change that perception. “We want our facility to be as home-like as possible, and we want the staff and residents to really feel that family atmosphere,” Bryant said. Bryant, who has worked at the facility for eight years, said he is optimistic about the center’s future. Purchased in August 2013 by Signature Health Care, Liberty Care has undergone many changes for the betterment of the residents and staff. “Signature Health Care is such a great company, and they allow us to do so much for our residents,” Bryant said. From vacation getaways in Florida to agrarian gardens, the Liberty Care Center offers residents the opportunity to live their lives to the fullest. Dominic Gordon, chaplain, loves the upgrades at the care center. “Signature Health Care wants to change the face of long-term healthcare from that of an institution to a home setting,” she said. “We want this place to feel like a home.” One way they are working toward a home-like atmosphere is with their recent renovations. A new chapel, general store, and a completely overhauled dining room

New renovations to the Liberty Care Center include a completely overhauled lobby and waiting area, complete with large recliners, hard wood flooring and a fireplace. The facility is striving to create a more “home-like” atmosphere for its residents.

Chaplain Dominic Gordon stands in front of the center's new chapel, which will be available to residents for prayer and devotions, and will also have a SmartTV that will feature shows such as The Gaither Homecoming and other Christian movies.

bears little resemblance to the facility as it was in the past. “Everything we are doing is an effort to create that ‘homey’ atmosphere. Instead of just calling them ‘A, B, and C’ halls, we are putting up street signs with the names of our streets—Glory Street, Lake Liberty Boulevard, and Casey Branch Way—in the hallways,” Gordon said. Fireplaces have been installed along with new flooring and paint. A buffet line has even been added to the cafeteria, complete with a pizza oven and ice cream machine. Another way Liberty Care is reaching toward a ‘homey’ atmosphere is through a certified Eden program. The Eden program, according to the website www.edenalt.org, rejects the idea that age means a decline in life. Instead, they believe that a person never stops growing and learning. Using gardens, plants, children and community activities, the non-profit Eden program supports the ongoing growth of an individual. Through Eden initiatives, the Liberty Care Center has a garden, will be receiving a certified companion black labrador, and will also be hosting a vacation Bible school this year. During vacation Bible school, the residents will partner with children and participate in Bible school activities.

Evaluation

Recently Liberty Care, as well as nursing homes across the country, was evaluated by Medicare.

Findings for Liberty Care included:

- A resident’s room had food particles and debris on the floor, black spots and dust on the window-sill, and dead ants by the sink. Another resident’s room had a damaged nightstand, a loose and leaky sink faucet, and red stains on the wall above the bed.
- A resident who required a chair alarm did not have a chair alarm in place.
- Faculty failed to ensure different food was available to two residents whose food preferences indicated they did not like what was being served, pinto beans.
- Lack of consistent hand washing by the staff during meals.
- Failed to obtain the laboratory services to meet the needs of one resident within stated time frame. A detailed report on the center’s performance can be read at www.medicare.org. “The evaluation was fair,” Bryant said. “It has really helped us to improve and it gives residents and potential residents that safety net. We have increased our staffing to better our patient/staff ratios, and we immediately fixed issues in the survey.” “This facility is great. We always have room for improvement, but anything we can do is a great thing,” Bryant said. “Above all we want people to have one impression of this facility and the people here — it is a home, and we are a family.”

POLICE NEWS

DUI

■ Juan Elias, 23, of 1354 Blue Lake Way, Bowling Green, was arrested on June 6 by Deputy Chad G. Weddle at the junction of Ky. 1547 and Ky. 70 and charged with first offense DUI, no operator's license, and failure of non-owner to maintain insurance. Court records show that Elias was involved in a one-vehicle accident and failed several field sobriety tests. Elias, who refused a portable breath test and was very unstable on his feet, admitted to Weddle that he drank 4-5 beers.

Assault

■ William Salyers, 26, of 1088 Rouse Branch Road, Liberty, was arrested on June 7 at his home by Deputy Chad G. Weddle and charged with fourth-degree assault domestic, minor injury. The arrest citation states that Salyers was involved in a physical dispute with his mother, Deloise Salyers. She told Weddle that her son became angry and broke the house phone when she told him she was going to call the law. Salyers then put his hand around her neck and choked her, leaving red marks, court records state.

■ Robert M. Miller, 36, of Liberty, was arrested on June 4 at 829 Jackie Hollow Road by Deputy Jordan Buis and charged with fourth-degree assault domestic violence no visible injury. Buis states that Miller's mother, Rose Miller, told him she asked her son to leave. Miller grabbed and hit her right arm and then knocked her glasses off. Buis found Robert sitting in the bushes at the edge of the property, court documents show.

Possession of firearm by felon

Brian C. Edens, 35, of 1428 Green Pond Ridge Road, Liberty, was arrested on June 2 by Trooper Kevin Roberts at his residence and charged with possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Roberts states that he went to Eden's residence at the request of Keith Price and Patrick Campbell, Probation and Parole Officers. The officers were at Eden's residence to conduct a home visit as he is on parole from a conviction to manufacture, court records show. After Eden consented to a search, the officers found a sawed off 12 gauge shotgun hanging on a rack by the front door along with a Taurus PT 22 .22lr handgun in the bedroom. Edens admitted to the officers that the guns were his and he knew he was not supposed to have them.

Indicted in Marion County

Lewis Joe Burton, 52, of 1460 Hayes Hollow Road, Liberty, was indicted for first-degree possession of a controlled substance first offense and controlled substance not found in its original container.

According to the indictment, on or about Feb. 6, Burton possessed a Schedule I or II controlled substance, a narcotic (Oxycodone), or he aided, abetted or counseled with another in said act.

His bond was set at $1,000 with the condition that he uses no drugs or alcohol.

Theft

Shana Whittlock, 44, of Liberty, was arrested on June 3 by Deputy Chad G. Weddle and charged with theft by failure to make required disposition over $500. The arrest warrant states that on Sept. 27, 2014, Whittlock obtained a 2006 Chevrolet Cobalt automobile subject to a known legal obligation to return the vehicle to Ronald Rogers. Whittlock failed to return the vehicle to Rogers, court records state.

Parent to send child to school

Jennifer Terry, of 3401 Contown Road, Liberty, was cited on June 2 by Deputy Jamie Walters and charged with parent or child to send child to school. Court records state from Aug. 7, 2014 to April 22, 2015, Terry's 5-year-old child had 16.5 unexcused absences and was tardy once.

Diplomas

"Our time here together will not be measured in class periods, but in memories shared," said class reporter Karey Sellers.

Tyra Sengkhamyong, class president, shared parting thoughts with her classmates.

"We came in as freshmen, blinked, and now we're seniors. But no matter what changes come in our future, we will always be the Class of 2015. Never forget, we will always be Casey Rebels." Principal Josh Blevins took the podium, and gave the final address before conferring degrees and pronouncing the Class of 2015.

"Be the best for the world," Blevins told the graduates. "You will leave a legacy that will make us proud. Let no barrier stand in your way. Be patient, be diligent, and above all—don't give up."
